Berke Khan

"The believers are but brothers, so make settlement between your brothers. And fear Allah that you may receive mercy."

— Surah Al-Hujurat 49:10

While the Mongol armies were destroying the cities of Islam, a grandson of Genghis Khan himself embraced Islam. Berke Khan, khan of the Golden Horde, was angered by the destruction of Baghdad, fought his cousin Hulagu at the Terek River, and allied with Sultan Baybars of Egypt. This book also tells honestly of the injustices of his armies and the worldly interests behind his war; every lesson rests on the Qur'an and authentic Hadith.
